Case No. 10-cr-00376-JSW-3

ORDER GRANTING SECOND MOTION FOR EARLY
TERMINATION OF SUPERVISED RELEASE

Re: Dkt. No. 442

This matter comes before the Court on consideration of the second motion for early termination of supervised release filed by Oshan Cook (“Cook”).¹ The Court has considered the parties’ papers, relevant legal authority, and the record in this case, and it concludes the motion is suitable for disposition without a hearing. The Court recounted the facts underlying Cook’s conviction when it denied his first motion for early termination of supervised release. (See Dkt. No. 441.) The Court will not repeat those facts here and will address relevant facts in the analysis below. For the reasons that follow, the Court GRANTS the motion.

ANALYSIS

As the moving party, Cook bears the burden to show that early termination is appropriate. See United States v. Weber, 451 F.3d 552, 559 n.9 (9th Cir. 2006). A court may, after considering the factors set forth in section 3553(a)(1), (a)(2)(B), (a)(2)(C), (a)(2)(D), (a)(4), (a)(5), (a)(6), and (a)(7)-- terminate a term of supervised release and discharge the defendant released at any time after the expiration of one year of supervised

1 release, pursuant to the provisions of the Federal Rules of Criminal
2 Procedure relating to the modification of probation, if it is satisfied
3 that such action is warranted by the conduct of the defendant released and the interest of justice[.]

4 18 U.S.C. § 3583(e)(1); see also United States v. Emmett, 749 F.3d 817, 819 (9th Cir. 2014) (“The
5 correct legal standard for deciding a motion to terminate supervised release is set forth in 18
6 U.S.C. § 3583(e).”). In Emmett, the court emphasized that “[t]he expansive phrases ‘conduct of 7 the defendant’ and ‘interest of justice’ make clear that a district court enjoys discretion to consider
8 a wide range of circumstances” in order to determine whether to terminate supervised release. Id.;
9 accord United States v. Miller, 205 F.3d 1098, 1011 (9th Cir. 2000).

10 Section 3583(e) permits “a sentencing court ... to respond to changes in the defendant’s
11 circumstances that may render a previously imposed condition of release either too harsh or 12 inappropriately tailored to serve the general punishment goals of [Section] 3553(a).” United
13 States v. Gross, 307 F.3d 1043, 1044 (9th Cir. 2002) (citing Miller, 205 F.3d at 1011). The statute
14 does not “categorically require[] a petitioner to demonstrate undue hardship.” Emmett, 749 F.3d at 15 819-20. However, the lack of undue hardship may be considered to determine whether the interest
16 of justice warrants early termination. Id. at 820. A district court is not required to “tick off each
17 of the relevant” 3553(a) factors, but it must provide an “explanation that would permit meaningful 18 appellate review and justify the court’s conclusion.” Id. at 822.

19 Cook began his term of supervised release on June 12, 2020, which satisfies the 20 requirement that he complete at least one year of his term. In this case, the Court imposed a 21 mandatory minimum term of supervised release. The Ninth Circuit has not addressed whether a 22 district court has the authority to terminate a mandatory minimum term of supervised release
23 before it expires. However, other Circuits have determined that courts have discretion to do so,
24 and the Court finds the reasoning in those cases persuasive. See, e.g., Pope v. Perdue, 889 F.3d
25 410, 414 (7th Cir. 2018); United States v. Spinelle, 41 F.3d 1056, 1058-61 (6th Cir. 1994); see
26 also United States v. Trotter, 321 F. Supp. 3d 337, 360 (E.D.N.Y. 2018).

27 The Court concludes Cook has not demonstrated that continuation of supervised release
28

1 poses a hardship. See Emmett, 749 F.3d at 819-20. Therefore, the Court turns to the remaining
2 Section 3553(a) factors. The Government opposes Cook's motion, based on in part on a lack of 3 documentation about his business. The Probation Officer has not raised that as a concern, and 4 Cook has submitted additional information with his reply that support his position that he is 5 gainfully employed. Cook has not been before the Court on any alleged violations of his 6 conditions of supervised release and there is no indication in the record to suggest he has engaged
7 in any criminal activity since his release. For the reasons set forth in its previous Order, Cook
8 does not appear likely to re-offend or otherwise pose a risk to the public. (Order Denying Motion
9 at 3:14-21.) The Court also has considered the costs that could be saved if the Court were to grant
10 this motion, and it recognizes that continued supervised release does impose costs on the public.

11 The need to afford adequate deterrence is also one of the factors the Court must consider.
12 When Cook filed his first motion, his Probation Officer opposed the request to terminate
13 supervision, which factored into the Court's evaluation of the motion. Cook's Probation Officer
14 now notes that he has been on the Low Intensity Supervision caseload since November 13, 2020
15 and has continued to do well under that level of supervision. She also notes that Cook has been 16 responsive to all her requests. As such, she does not oppose his request. Cook's offense was 17 serious, but the Court concludes that the adequate deterrence factor no longer weighs in favor of 18 continued supervision. 18 U.S.C. § 3553(a)(2)(B).

19 Accordingly, the Court GRANTS Cook's motion, and terminates him from supervised
20 release as of the date of this Order.

21 IT IS SO ORDERED.
